David Creelman from Creelman Research (http://www.creelmanresearch.com) on Lukas Michel's Performance Triangle: «I've followed the work of Swiss consultant Lukas Michel for many years now; so I was pleased to see he has written a book, The Performance Triangle. I asked him why it was packed full of questions instead of just giving 5 tips in the style of Jim Collins. He said "This is quite straightforward. I don't believe in tips. I don't believe in best practices. I don't believe in the value of any recommendation that I am giving to someone else. You cannot help someone develop a golf swing by explaining how a golf swing works. You help them by getting them to focus on one specific thing..."» http://creelmanresearchlibrary.wordpress.com/lukas-michels-performance-triangle/
